THE BIRTH OF IMMANUEL PROGRESSIVE BAPTIST CHURCH

BY AVIS WILLIAMS

The inaugural worship service of Immanuel Progressive Baptist Church was held on Easter Sunday, 2006, in Covington, Georgia. The idea for a new fellowship came to me in October 2005, during moments of fasting, prayer, and meditation. At the time, I was in my first year of seminary at Candler School of Theology at Emory University. I was a forty-six-year-old second career student, returning to academia after many years. I had my mind only on my studies, but apparently, the Lord had other plans.

David Key, director of Baptist Studies at Candler, prophesied during our first meeting that before I graduated from Candler, I would be serving as a pastor of a church and might even start one. But I had a heavy school schedule and was enduring physical challenges during that first semester. I was learning how to study all over again, and the thought of more responsibility from God in leading God's people in a weekly church setting was not what I had in mind.

Eventually though I realized that the Lord was leading and guiding this effort, and I knew that Immanuel Progressive would not just be a Sunday morning church. We were being tasked by God to be available in ministry to fellowship with all peoples of the world. To prepare for the new church, Audrey Morgan, Thomas Johnson (then age 9), and I began having prayer meetings at my home each Sunday afternoon. Sometimes we were joined by Rev. Asa Floyd, Thomas' brother, Sharoski, and their mother, Larenda. We met over a couple of months, praying for the new fellowship called "Immanuel," which means "God with us."

The announcement of the new church was made at my home church, Bethlehem Baptist Church, in Covington, Georgia, in February 2006. But there were still so many unanswered questions, including where we would meet. We finally settled on Porterdale Elementary School. The principal, Lizella Dotson, allowed us to hold our first worship service there, but she said we would not be able to meet there regularly.

We decided to hold our first service on Sunday afternoon, April 16, 2006. As we talked about new beginnings and ministry opportunities, the local community and members of Bethlehem offered support of this new ministry.

Finally, the day came, and our first service was wonderful. But we wondered where we would meet the next week. Pastor Clara Lett of Rainbow Covenant Ministries called me the next morning to offer her support to us. I asked her to pray with us that we would find a weekly meeting space. She told me that our prayer had already been answered. We could meet at her church, and we would not have to pay rent. Hallelujah and Praise the Lord was my response, along with a resounding YES! We met at Rainbow Covenant for seven months and were then offered space at New Hope Baptist Church in Covington, Georgia, where we still meet today, thanks to their pastor, Harold Miller, and the congregation.

Immanuel's mission statement is "God with us as we move faithfully to make a positive difference in the lives of all peoples." For us, the word "peoples" indicates our openness to anyone anywhere in the world. Most of our members have been or are living in shelters or prisons. Most have no stable source of income. We do not have a church budget. But Immanuel is a missional church and a giving church. One story—we had a family whose van needed repair but they had no funds. I negotiated with a local repair shop, and the cost was lowered from $2,100 to $1,200, but although the church did not have $1,200, the Holy Spirit assured us that we would be able to pay for the repairs in thirty days. In twenty-seven days we had the money. As a result, two young men from that family joined our fellowship and were baptized.

At the invitation of Deacon Forrest and Deaconess Sharon Sawyer, the church is now a regular guest on "Thy Brother's and Sister's Keeper," on 1430AM, WGFS radio in Newton County. During the program, the Immanuel youth choir sings, and I pray and bring words of encouragement.

Immanuel Progressive Baptist Church is excited about what lies ahead, and we look forward to participating in the ministry and work of the Lord.

JONCI WOMACK

KATE HANCH
Holmeswood Baptist Church Kansas City, MO

One hundred and five Baptist churches across the nation and one in Cuba joined together in February 2010 to observe the fourth annual Martha Stearns Marshall Month of Preaching. Churches in eighteen states (Alabama, Arkansas, California, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia) and District of Columbia invited women into their pulpits to proclaim the good news of Jesus Christ. The event has grown since in 2007, when fifty-five churches participated in the inaugural Month of Preaching.

Sponsored by the Baptist Women in Ministry, the event is named for Martha Stearns Marshall, an eighteenth-century North Carolina Separate Baptist woman, who preached alongside her brother and husband. The event is both a celebration of women in the pulpit and an opportunity to educate congregations about women in ministry.

Micah Pritchett, pastor in Kansas City, Missouri, invited two students from William Jewell College, Hannah Lewis and Abby Pratt, to preach at Englewood Baptist Church. In the welcome to worship, Pritchett told stories of his own opportunities as a seminary student to preach in small Texas churches, and he reminisced, "Those churches gave me an opportunity to explore my calling and see if this was what God really wanted me to do. They let me use my gifts and gain some experience. Those little country churches play an important role in preparing young ministers for ministry. But most of those little churches won't invite a woman to come preach. Young women don't get those opportunities that I had." Pritchett continued, "Today we are saying that we support women in ministry—not just in theory, but in a very practical way as we bless and encourage these two young women as they explore God's call on their lives."

For Martha Stearns Marshall Day at Bethel Baptist Church, Scottsburg, Virginia, JONCI WOMACK preached on Phil. 1:12-14, reminding the congregation that "we can give all of our troubles to God because he has promised to never leave us or forsake us." Of the experience of preaching, WOMACK said, "I felt that having the opportunity to speak was a chance for me to show that we are all called to speak out and share God's love with this broken world, not only on Sunday morning, but each and every day of our lives."

KATE HANCH, children's ministry associate at Holmeswood Baptist Church in Kansas City, Missouri, preached on Luke 4 and the temptations of Jesus. Keith Herron, the church's pastor, expressed his appreciation for her words: "What was so extraordinary about Kate's sermon was the obvious attention she put into writing a well-crafted word on a tough text. That's not a text one can nibble around the edges because the text itself demands one go courageously to the heart of the story. Kate demonstrated that she knew how to approach the text and her sermon was well done because she had seriously listened to the story and helped us listen too.”

BAILEY EDWARDS NELSON

preached twice for Martha Stearns Marshall Day, once at the church where she serves, Hendricks Avenue Baptist Church, Jacksonville, Florida, and once at First Baptist Church, Rockingham, North Carolina. Nelson was preaching for the first time as a mother, having given birth to her son, Aidan, on December 17, 2009. “To step into the pulpit for the first time as a mother,” Nelson noted “was a distinct and overwhelming intersection with the ever-creating God. My son has colored the way I approach the Holy, and as a result, the way I approach the task of preaching. Love, mercy, and hope have been manifested in my life and I can hold him in my arms . . . who dare not be changed by that?”

This year Martha Stearns Marshall Day was observed for the first time in Cuba.

LAUREN COLWELL, associate minister for spiritual formation and families at First Baptist Church, Savannah, Georgia, preached with the assistance of a translator, Marioles, at Iglesia

Bautista Genesaret in Sancti Spiritus, Cuba. “I was nervous about conveying a relevant and coherent message through a translator,” Colwell said, “but Marioles dispelled those fears immediately. My limited Spanish knowledge told me that she not only provided a better than dynamically equivalent translation, but also matched the tone, inflection and emphasis in my delivery. What a powerful experience it was to share the act of preaching in two different languages before our sister congregation in Sancti Spiritus, Cuba.” Colwell’s sermon focused on the story of Hagar and Ishmael in the desert, and she challenged her listeners: “We are often quick to forget what we have seen or learned in the past, but we still have reason to look to an expectant, hopeful future. When we allow God to open our eyes, like Hagar, we experience a different outlook.”

Baptist Women in Ministry is grateful to all the churches and women preachers who participated! A list of the participants is on pages 6-7. If you participated and your church is not listed, please contact Pam Durso at pamdurso@bwim.info. And please get Martha Stearns Marshall Month on your 2011 calendar!
