

Write personalized, handwritten notes and mail them to the women pastors in your regional and/or state association.

Handwritten notes carry a unique, personal touch that can profoundly impact the woman who reads them. In an age dominated by digital communication, taking the time to write a personalized letter signifies a deep level of care and commitment. These notes affirm women pastors' calling and dedication, reminding them that their work is valued and their leadership is crucial. By expressing appreciation and encouragement, you directly counter the negative messages and isolation that they may feel from the broader Baptist narrative.

Receiving a handwritten note can uplift and empower women pastors, reinforcing their sense of purpose and belonging. These notes foster a sense of community and solidarity, creating a supportive network among Baptist women in ministry. When women pastors know they have allies standing with them, it strengthens their resolve and inspires them to continue their vital work. This personal affirmation helps build a more inclusive and affirming Baptist community.

Hi Pastor [Name],

I hope you're doing well! I just wanted to send a quick note to say how much I appreciate all you do for our community. Your leadership and dedication mean so much to all of us.

I know these times can be tough, especially with some of the negative messages out there, but please remember that there are so many of us who support you and believe in your calling. Your work is incredibly valuable, and we're grateful for everything you do.

Thank you for being such an inspiring and uplifting presence. Keep shining!

Best,

[Your Name]
